Rotary Education Moment

From The Rotarian August 1939: In 1727, Benjamin Franklin organized a group of 12 friends to debate questions of morals, politics, and philosophy and to exchange knowledge of business affairs. They called themselves the Junto. Although the members came from diverse occupations and backgrounds, they shared a desire to improve themselves and their community and to help others. In his article "Franklin Almost Invented Rotary," author Carl Van Doren pointed out the similarities between Paul Harris' idea for Rotary and Franklin's club, despite their 200-year difference.

September 4 Program

Mary Mosiman, State Auditor

Final action on the fiscal year 2015 budget shows that Iowa continues to make progress.

Fiscal sustainability is evidenced by spending discipline during times of revenue growth, and by maintaining statutory balances in reserve funds.

Long-term planning will be key to successfully dealing with future budgets - specifically the expense of accelerated multi-year commitments.
